New show in town

A mural, created by the late Juniata County artist Dwight Kirkland of Blackleaf Studio LLC, celebrates Lewistown's many theatres that once decorated the town. Kirkland's mural can be found on the side of KC's Gifts, Jewelry and Award store, on the building owned by Mike Buffington, on Monument Square. Five major, long-lived theatres in Lewistown's history are represented in the logos across the bottom, and the fronts of three theatres are illustrated.

Kirkland donated his time and labor as a gift to the community, and hoped the mural would be enjoyed for many years to come. He encouraged everyone who appreciates the mural to make a donation to Friends of the Embassy Theater to help with the theater's restoration. "If everyone who liked this mural on Facebook donated just $20, it would really add up," he said. Donations may be sent to: Embassy Theater Restoration Fund, P.O. Box 203, Burnham, PA 17009.

Roy Rogers was a popular cowboy movie star in the 1930s and 40s. He and his horse Trigger appeared on the Embassy stage on June 16, 1941.

HISTORY BY Paul T. Fagley

The Miller Theatre was painted from a photo taken on opening night, March 31, 1949. Until 1981, it was a single screen theatre seating 1,200 people. It operates today on West Market Street as Miller Cinema 6. Miller's longtime manager Bob Hambright is depicted in front of the theatre. His career spanned 53 years, starting as an usher at the Embassy. He also worked briefly at the Rialto. Hambright passed away in 2003.

Temple Theatre (logo at the bottom) was Lewistown's first theatre. It was located in the Masonic building across the square. It opened as the "Temple Opera House" in 1894. It closed in 1925.

The Embassy Theatre, built in 1927, is currently being restored to its former glory to be an operating historic theatre.

The Pastime Theatre (logo at bottom, far right) was a favorite Saturday place for kids. They dubbed it the "Shoot-N-Juke" (and other nicknames) because of its western shows. The theater was on Market Street, from 1906 to 1953, in part of the building that now houses the Downtown OIP & Grille.

Jean Acker was a film star in the late teens and early 1920s. She was married to the "World's Greatest Screen Lover," Rudolph Valentino, for a mere 6 hours! During her childhood, she lived in Lewistown, and her father ran the Casino Bowling Alley.

Fagley is president of Friends of the Embassy.

The Rialto Theatre once stood in the area in front of the mural. It opened in 1911 as the Orpheum Theatre, and was renamed the Rialto in 1920. The classic films "Gone With the Wind" and "The Wizard of Oz" played there. It closed in 1958.

Edwin "Doc" Eby, was a local pharmacist who promoted his elixir, WISTO, to celebrities appearing at theatres in town, thus he earned title of Lewistown's Official Greeter. (See Forest K. Fisher's article about Eby in CG Spring '13.)

Tri-Panel Mural - beside Pennian Bank, Route 35, Mifflintown. Mural sponsored by the Juniata Cultural Arts Committee. Features wildlife and the former Juniata River Bridge in Mifflintown.

Quilt Mural Trail—

The Perry County Council of the Arts Quilt Mural Trail features 29- 8'x8' painted quilts, mounted on barns and buildings along Perry, Juniata and Mifflin County roadways. Students from these counties participated in this arts-residency program.
