

One of our favorite ways to know it's spring in the Juniata River Valley is the re-awakening of our gardens. And with that comes the opportunity to get dirty while adding a few new plants. Use this list to find those new plants, get inspiration for your garden and while you're at it, discover a new corner of the beautiful Juniata River Valley.

Flower displays

Downtown Lewistown Adopt-a-Planter Program — Market Street, Lewistown. This collaborative effort between the Borough of Lewistown and Penn State Master Gardeners, coordinated by Sara Buffington, has really brightened the downtown with many individuals and businesses stepping to the plate and "adopting" a planter.

Allensville flower planters—Route 655, Allensville. Drive along the highway to view the stock tanks filled to the brim with flowers.

How to get there: Your GPS will be enough to help you navigate the back country roads of Mifflin and Juniata Counties but do yourself a favor and call or google to verify the hours of the businesses before you go. Each owner sets their own hours and some are open only on weekends. Most will be closed on Sunday.

Other suggestions: Bring cash. The Juniata River Valley is populated with many industrious Amish families who will welcome your business but not necessarily your credit card.

Don't be afraid to ask the owners for their recommendations. Many welcome questions and their expertise could solve your biggest gardening problems.
